The Inspector General (IG) is an extension of the eyes and ears of the commander. The IG provides an objective avenue for military members, civilians, and their dependents to expose gross mismanagement, violation of policy, injustice, and fraud, waste and abuse. Although individuals are encouraged to work problems through their chain of command, the IG is there to provide an alternative when an individual has compelling reasons not to use their chain or wishes to remain anonymous.

Everyone has the right to contact the IG at any time and no one may hinder you from doing so. Retaliatory measures may not be used against you for going to the IG to resolve an issue. If you decide to make a complaint, AFI 90-301, Inspector General Complaints Resolution, explains the program. All inquiries will be answered objectively and confidentially.

However, the IG complaint program does not generally address issues that are covered by other grievance channels unless there is reason to believe those grievance channels were improperly administered. Dissatisfaction with the outcome is not considered improper administration. Listed below are examples of problems addressed by other Air Force instructions/programs.

TYPE OF COMPLAINT

Discrimination complaints

If you feel you have an IG complaint or an issue and you do not know what grievance channel it falls under, please do not hesitate to give us a call.
